Sloppy Firsts by Megan McCafferty

Pg. 131 I felt his mouth on mine. We were kissing. Kissing him didn't make my skin crawl. I liked it. To be honest, I really liked it. I could taste the whiskey on his tongue, and feel the heat of his breath on my face. As our mouths got warmer and wetter, he rolled my body on top of his. His hands in my hair, against the nape of my neck, over my shoulders, on the small of my back.

Pg. 106 Pierre, I've always admired your ability to fill out a pair of tightie- whities. And I'll never forget the night I found the night I found out that you know your way around a clitoris. See you in my wettest, wildest dreams.

Pg. 16 And he says, "I can think of one way to make it even better." And then he slowly walks over to me, cups my (totally zit free) face in his hands and ever so gently kisses me on the lips. We break away for a brief moment, look each other in the eyes, and smile. We start kissing again, but with more passion. Then we rumble onto the gymnastic mat that is conveniently lying on the floor and have the sweetest sexual experience ever to occur within the hallowed halls of Pineville High.

Pg. 15 Rob's recent claim to fame is that he celebrated an away-game victory by persuading a freshman cheerleader to hide under his Seagulls varsity jacket and suck him off in the backseat of the bus. Go

Pg. 12 Scotty is the most self-censoring foul mouth I know. Like every other Jock, he worships Opie and Anthony-the afternoon talk-radio duo and misogynistic masterminds behind "Whip 'Em Out Wednesdays (female motorists are encouraged to titty-flash any male driver with a WOW sign on his car) and "Guess What's In My Pants" (a female caller rubs a phone against her most private of areas, and male contestants try to guess whether she's sporting a "Brillo", a "Triangle", a "Hitler", or a "Wood Floor
